The Frank Mahoney Award recognizes outstanding leadership, community service and real estate brokerage success among young industrial real estate professionals—those with less than five years of experience. The annual award was established to recognize a young industrial real estate professional who embodies the character traits displayed by Frank Mahoney.

“I’m absolutely honored to be awarded this prestigious award,” said DeSerto, “Many recognized individuals in our industry have received this award. To be one of them makes me extremely proud of myself and I’m looking forward what else this awesome career has in store.”

Frank Mahoney began his industrial real estate career in the early 1970’s after serving as a clergyman in South America. He started his career with Van Vlissingen & Company before ultimately beginning his own firm, Frank Mahoney & Associates, in the early 1980s. Throughout his career, until his death in the late 1980s, Mahoney was an active member of AIRE serving as a member, committee chairman, director and an officer of the organization.
